

Guidelines for exhibiting work in the Firefly Coffee House and Arts and Crafts

Basically: Firefly has twelve month-long exhibitions per year consisting of a variety of invitational solo, dual, and group exhibitions as well as several open-call juried themed shows. Firefly and the curator strive to keep the vision of the artist in mind during decision-making and vice versa. We serve art and the community and promote a DIY attitude.

Timelines: Exhibitions are hung at the first of the month and removed at the end of the month; specific dates are decided by the curator and artist. Works being shipped must arrive at least one week prior to hanging. Again, specific dates will be discussed between the curator and artist. Works must be picked up no later than thirty days after the end of the show they exhibited in. Firefly will ship respective works back to the artist within thirty days after the end of the show provided the artist has supplied sufficient postage. All costs accrued during the delivery and return of work are the responsibility of the artist.

On Hanging: Work must arrive wired-for-hanging. No saw tooth hangers. Other methods of hanging may be discussed between the curator and artist. Firefly reserves the right to remove any piece of work at any time for any reason. Overly vulgar or violent content or imagery will not be displayed. All pieces must have a work label attached to the back for identification purposes. These can be downloaded from our website or the artist can make their own with the artist name, title of work, size, media, and price included.

Fees and Payment: A twenty percent commission is taken from all sold works. Because the Firefly encourages community involvement and strives to facilitate the arts, this commission can be reduced to ten percent. If the artist creates his or her own labels, participates in the hanging of their own works and the removal of them, the commission will be reduced. Payments for sold works will be mailed no later than thirty days after the end of the show.
